AWARD-WINNING ICE CREAM & SORBET
HANDCRAFTED BY CHEFS

Great ingredients mean everything to us.
That's why we always use the freshest, most local and seasonal ones we can find. We never add artificial flavourings, stabilisers or additives.

Every luxurious scoop is handmade by our chefs in our West Sussex kitchen.

We hope you love our real, honest ice cream and sorbet as much as the Great Taste Awards do.

A guide to compostable packaging & waste

Going plastic-free and keen to understand more about waste? Cut the confusion with this handy guide by Vegware, the global specialist in plant-based compostable foodservice packaging.

Recyclable

Everyone likes the word 'recyclable' but in reality, conventional foodservice packaging can't be recycled.

Kept separate, dry card or paper can be recycled. So can plastic water bottles or metal drink cans. But used catering disposables are a mix of card, plastic and food, so food contamination is inevitable. This combination creates massive recycling challenges, so the result is often incineration or landfill.

With compostable disposables, food isn't contamination, it's a vital ingredient in the composting process.

Biodegradable

Biodegradable means something breaks down naturally, but it can take years. Biodegradable tells us nothing about timescales – for example, wood is biodegradable, but a log cabin can stand for generations.

When it comes to biodegradable, there is no guarantee it will break down in commercial composting.

Compostable = biodegradable, in under 12 weeks!

Compostable means something can break down in under 12 weeks, and is therefore suitable for commercial composting together with food waste.

Commercial composting creates the perfect balance of microbes, moisture and warmth. So instead of being buried or burnt, your compostable catering 'waste' creates nutrient-rich compost that helps plants thrive.
